We know the challenges you are facing

Your IT team is too busy

Instead of focusing on growth, their time is mostly spent on day-to-day maintenance tasks. As remote workers struggle with everyday mishaps and device failures, it's up to IT to keep them going. But that is just too much to put on one, under-resourced team.

According to a recent study, top IT pain points include supporting workers to adequately perform their daily jobs, security, and data protection¹.

Over-stretched and overburdened, your IT team needs a break. Working with an external business partner is one way of giving it to them.

Boost EX

Whether it's a slow device or connectivity issues, workers rely on IT to fix their problem, and fix it quickly. Slow IT response causes people to lose focus and motivation.

End-users waste around 3 hours every time they submit an IT ticket . Finding a way to take them from ticket to resolution faster minimizes costly downtime and boosts employee morale and overall productivity.

According to Global IT Experience Benchmark Report, outsourced IT service desks can improve employee experience by 36% on average².

Costs are going up

Hybrid working requires an optimized device fleet. However, a shortage of skilled IT workers has made supporting the growing hybrid workforce much harder: downtime has increased, and performance has been going down.

Technology is evolving fast – and employees' demands with it. Making your people happy and improving productivity starts by embracing new ways of working and giving them the support, they need.

A seamless and direct line to expert technicians means your employees can solve their issues much quicker, empowering them throughout the workday.
